Two dentists from U.S. plus their support staff teamed up with four dentists in Nicaragua to serve the community around the Children of the Dump Project. Volunteers worked from early morning through late afternoon/evening through the week and served about 200 patients.

Kathleen Gapa led the 50/50 raffle today. Margaret Blohm was the winner of $15.

Colleen Nieman introduced today's two speakers, Rev. Monica M. Villarreal from Salem Lutheran Church in Flint, and Jennifer M. Rogers, an upcoming May graduate from the University of Michigan – Flint in social work. Rev. Monica has a Masters Degree in Social Work. Both spoke on lead and the Flint water crisis.

Rev. Monica through the Lutheran Church has traveled for humanitarian reasons to Latin America and Africa. Water issues are big in those regions of the world. Water is life and precious. There is still a water crisis in Flint and basic needs of community are not being met. It is estimated 2020 is when the infrastructure improvements will be completed in Flint. Education is a huge part of the lead crisis. Children need proper nutrition to deal with lead poisoning.

We watched a one-year old video about how the Flint water crisis came about. Not a lot has changed since the video was made per Rev. Monica. Food Bank of Eastern Michigan provides 100,000 lbs. of water every two weeks in Flint. The crisis began in 2014 when City of Flint switched from Detroit water to Flint River water for budget reasons. Residents immediately protested smelly water, hair loss, and lead in children. For almost two years the City and State said the water was fine. The 42% poverty rate in Flint means many do not have access to clean water. Transportation is an issue for the poor in obtaining bottled water.

Rev. Monica's church delivers 120,000 lbs. of water weekly. They also provide water filters to residents, which offer some hope, but are not the solution. Salem Lutheran Church was built in 1952 and has galvanized steel pipes. Rev. Monica held up a bottle of yellow/brown water, which was drawn from the Church's tap today. The acidic Flint River water ate away the protective coating on interior of pipes and exposed the rust. It takes a long time for protective coating to build back-up. They are using Detroit water again, but damage to pipes from Flint water remains. They have to replace all the plumbing in the church.

Rev. Monica's church administrator, a mature women, has 15 times the permitted lead level in her blood. Acidic river water exposed residents across Flint to lead from the pipes and plumbing fixtures. They are pushing back on government reports that say Flint water today is okay. Homes and buildings in Flint still have rusty water and high lead levels.

Jennifer M. Rogers did an internship on the Flint water crisis for her upcoming BA degree in social work. She worked with Salem Lutheran in a neighborhood connection committee to seek social justice. They reached out to the poor, elderly and homebound to deliver water and food. Food is important to offset lead poisoning. They try to educate the exposed population regarding lead poisoning.

Salem Lutheran Church is one of three "Help Centers" in City of Flint and is a water distribution center. They have distributed 4,000,000 lbs. of water since 2016. Rev. Monica chairs an advisory board for the Help Centers. Several non-profit groups serve the Help Centers and they look for holistic solutions for the water crises.

Michigan has committed upward of $237 million for the crisis. Money is for infrastructure and nutrition. The 2018 State Budget has $140 million for the crisis. 800 service lines have been replaced so far, goal is 6,000 service pipes per year. Cost is $5,000. per home. 20,000 service lines need to be replaced. Need home owner permission to replace service lines. State of Michigan operates nine water distribution centers in Flint. The State is presently considering closing them as demand for bottle water declines. Poverty rate by Rev. Monica's church is high and there is a high concentration of children. Residents like to obtain gallon jugs of water. They expect they will be using water filters for three years or more. Water crisis has been non-partisan and $100 million has come from the EPA.

PE Bob presented a check from The Dearborn Rotary Foundation to Rev. Monica to help with the Flint water crisis.

Respectfully submitted,
Davis Anderson
